To the Editor,

I am deeply concerned about the growing problem of drug addiction among young people. This issue is destroying lives, breaking families, and weakening our society. Drug abuse leads to poor health, crime, and unemployment, leaving families devastated and communities unsafe.

I urge authorities to take immediate steps. Schools should organize awareness programs, rehabilitation centers must be expanded, and strict laws should be enforced against drug suppliers. Parents and teachers must also guide young minds away from this destructive path.

Together, we can protect our youth and build a healthier future.

Yours sincerely,
